

~~UNBO~~ER

Story from UNBOTHERED >

Your Black Colleagues May Look Like They're Okay — Chances Are They're Not

DANIELLE CADET

LAST UPDATED MAY 28, 2020, 11:32 PM

Distpber

R29'S ~~STO~~ ~~IS~~ ~~AN~~ ~~ER~~ ~~MES~~ & FILMS

PHOTO: DANIA MAXWELL/LOS ANGELES TIMES/GETTY IMAGES.

Let's cut to the chase. It's been a tough few days...weeks...months.

For many people, working in the midst of a global pandemic has been difficult. For those of us fortunate enough to continue doing our jobs safely at home, we've had to somehow make ourselves look presentable for nonstop digital meetings, and had to learn how to be productive as the lines between our personal and professional lives continue to blur. We've run out of shows to stream, Instagram lives to watch, things to bake. We're confused and scared, and we don't know when any of this will be over.

ADVERTISEMENT

But there's a tale of two quarantines. Because while some Americans have been consumed by banana bread, others have had to navigate surviving a pandemic in a country they were never actually meant to live in.

Over the last few months, Black people have not only watched their friends and family members die at higher rates from the coronavirus, they have also watched people who look like them be gunned down while going for a jog, be murdered in their homes, threatened while bird watching in Central Park, and mercilessly choked on camera.

And every day, we have woken up and answered the emails and gotten on the Zoom calls. We've showed up with a smile, and put the pain and fear behind us. We've swallowed the rage while responding to our bosses, and offered the assistance and worked twice as hard for half as much — because that's all we know how to do.

But here's a newsflash for all the white people unaware of this fact: your Black colleagues may seem okay right now, but chances are they're not.

The likelihood that your Black colleague lost a family member to COVID-19 is painfully high. The chances that your Black colleague was triggered by the viral video of Amy Cooper because a white woman used her race and privilege and weaponized it against him is incredibly likely. The possibility that your Black colleague is afraid to go for a run, or terrified when her husband leaves the house, or just simply enraged by the incessant lies this country keeps telling us about equal liberties is so high you'll need a ladder to get it down.

ADVERTISEMENT

And yet, she's responded to your passive aggressive email, and he's smiled through your condescending questioning. Or even just found the strength to peel themselves out of bed and simply show up. Every day, Black people take the personal trauma we all know to be true and tuck it away to protect white people who are ignorant to the fact that it's nearly impossible to keep going when your grandma won't survive coronavirus because she has serious pre-existing conditions. It's hard to be your best self at work when we watch white women feign terror on the phone with authorities that will arrive at the scene and kill the Black man she called the cops on. It's even harder when you watch those cops kill that Black man on video, and sometimes the killers aren't even cops.

But we show up for work anyway. And we contain our rage, tears, fear and sadness. We write to each other in group chats. We send each other articles that articulate our feelings. We post and repost and retweet on social media. But we don't take our pain to work.

So while you navigate this pandemic which has ravaged our way of life — and prematurely taken the lives of so many no matter what race — acknowledge that burden is falling on your Black colleagues disproportionately. And know that they'll never show it. They've learned to navigate their worlds too well for that. And although we were told the degrees and the jobs and the accomplishments would somehow protect us from being treated like second-class citizens; although we were made to believe that working hard and contributing to society would mean society would treat us like human beings, we've learned the painful truth — that's a lie.

On behalf of your Black colleagues: we're not okay. And you shouldn't be either.

BLACK TRAUMA AND SHOWING UP AT WORK

ORIGINALLY PUBLISHED ON MAY 28, 2020, 7:32 PM

UNBOTHERED • THE LATEST • NEWS

WRITTEN BY

DANIELLE
CADET

More from Politics

NEWS

Melania Trump Was Seen — Wait For It — Wearing A Mask In Public

FRANCA PROVENZANO 14 HOURS AGO

NEWS

What Is The Boyfriend Cliff? An Investigation Into Andrew Cuomo&#x2026

by ASIA EWART

NEWS

Sandra Bland's Death Proved Police Cameras Are Not Enough T...

by ASIA EWART

NEWS

Is Betsy DeVos Blackmailing Schools To Reopen, Whether Or Not It&...

by BRIANNA PROVENZANO

NEWS

A New Video Of Police Kneeing A Man's Neck Has Protestors D...

by BRIANNA PROVENZANO

NEWS

Zindzi Mandela, Politician & Daughter Of Nelson Mandela, Dies At 59

by ASIA EWART

NEWS

Here's The Real, Really Stupid Reason Michael Cohen Was Sen...

by ELLY BELLE

NEWS

Does Trump's Twitter Threat To Defund Schools Actually Mean...

by SARAH MIDKIFF

NEWS

As Millions Suffer From Unemployment, The Catholic Church Gets $1...

by SARAH MIDKIFF

NEWS

Is The Trump Tower Black Lives Matter Mural Meaningful – Or Just ...

by ELLY BELLE

NEWS

In Trump's America, It's No Surprise That The Supreme...

by ELLY BELLE

NEWS

116 Lawmakers Are Demanding An Immediate Reversal Of Trump'...

by ELLY BELLE

R29 Original Series

WATCH NOW

WATCH NOW

WATCH NOW

REFINERY29

COMPANY

- About Us
- Jobs
- Press
- Advertising
- Feedback
- Refinery29 Intelligence

INFORMATION

- R29 News
- Terms
- Privacy
- Archives
- RSS
- Ad Choices

EDITIONS

- United Kingdom
- Germany
- France
- Canada

NEWSLETTER SIGN-UP

<input type="text" value="EMAIL ADDRESS"/>	<input type="button" value="GO!"/>
--	------------------------------------